

Dad I Need your Help!

Results analysis of a survey about
"Teenagers and the Internet"

ALI Hassan

ABDULKareem

ABDULAziz

AHMADWaheed

SALMAN

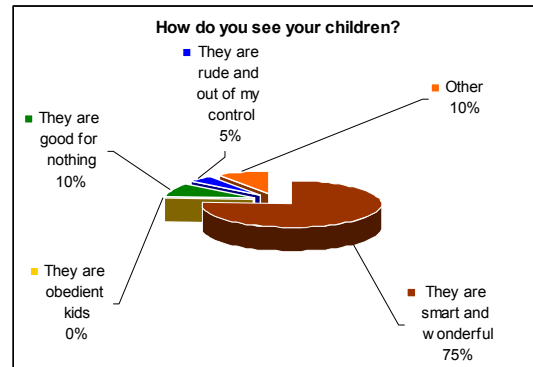

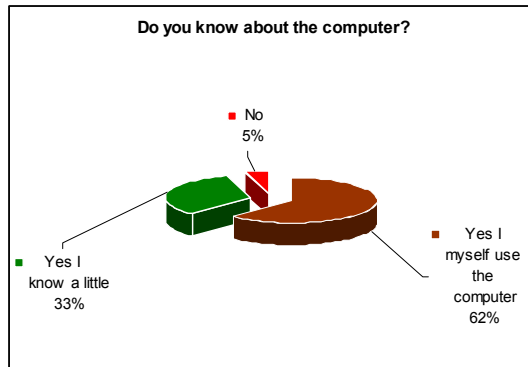

MOHAMADSadeq

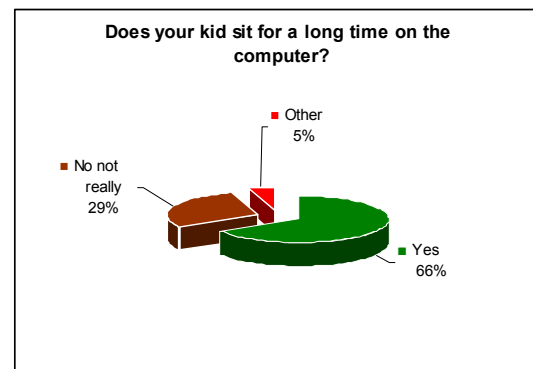

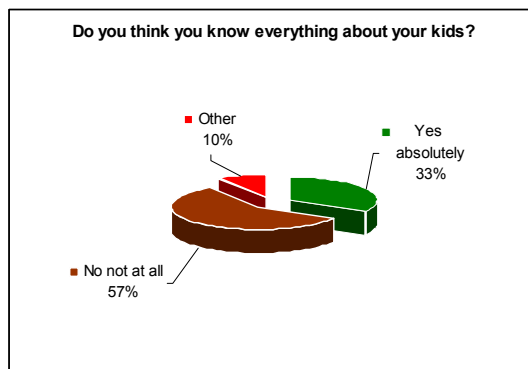

MOHAMAD

Part [1]: Background:

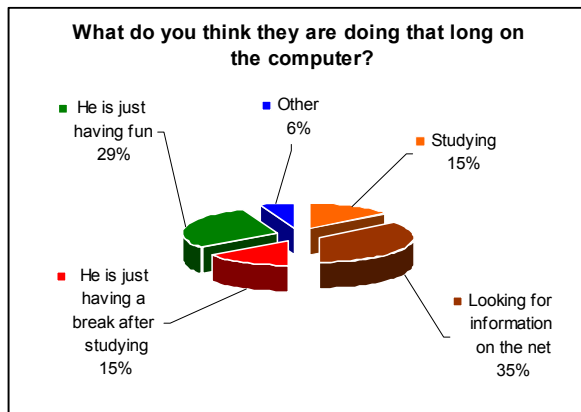

The majority of parents know about computers and how to use them, only 5% of them don't know anything. That makes me a bit relieved, that means that parents understand more about their kids and their –If I may say- obsession, rather than asking “why is my son/daughter stuck to this machine all the day?”

Despite that none of the parents find his/her child obedient, three quarters of them see that they are smart and wonderful. It just like saying he never does what he is told but he is still smart and wonderful. “They are smart because they don't do what they are told to and don't listen to you which makes them wonderful”, is this what you mean?

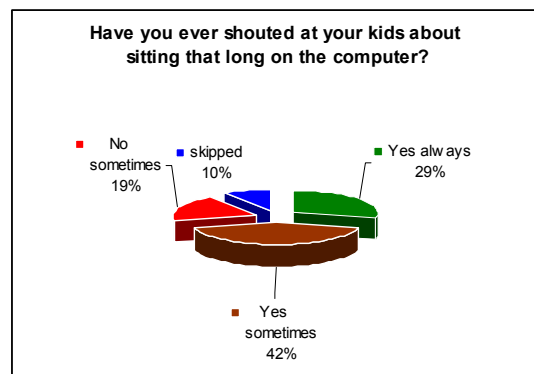

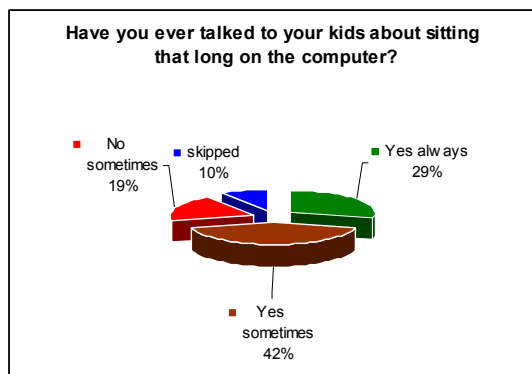

33% of the asked parents think that they know everything about their kids –I don't see this being reflected in their answers or in their sons'- but still more than half of them think that they know anything and for.....a miracle- to get know your own kids? Everything about their children and you are waiting. Parents' instinct? OR Parents are just suspicious? You find them addicted and you are ok with it? Cool
Oh wait they just sit at the computer for a long time they are not addicted, silly me

Half of the parents think that their students are studying or looking for information on the net -but are they?-,so if they are addicted to it because of studying and looking for info that's ok .Plus, they are grown up enough to know what's best for themselves-even though you might not have shown them what is the best earlier I am sure they now know what it is-.

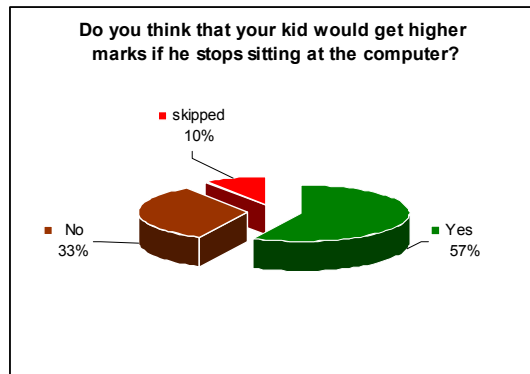

Part [2]: Behaviour with their Children:

It's quiet appealing to know that only one third of the parents have never talked to their kids about how long they sit on the computer, while another one third always does.-I wish they talked .

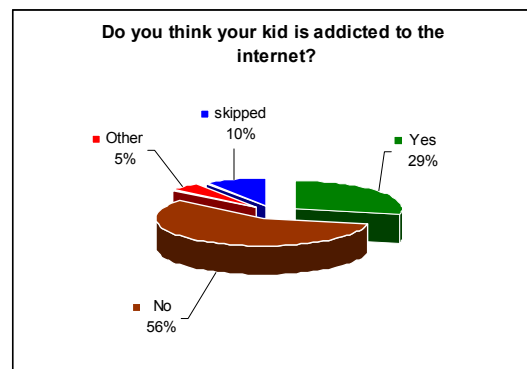

Of course the part mentioned above that has never talked to their kids certainly has never shouted at them too, which makes me wonder "why!" are their kids so perfect? or are they careless?

As I quite support the 42% that shout at their kids, sometimes I do not as shouting I just makes things worse , even though it is needed sometimes, two times to be precise –one of them is awaking people from sleep-

Doubtlessly, more than half of these parents think that sitting that long on the computer influence their kids marks negatively., and you find shouting is one of the best solutions to make your kids' marks better. Not really, unless you really look scary when you shout -not like a lion kids are used to these things these days you know- just like a monster but you know I still doubt it.

Part [3]: Parents attitude to computer addiction:

And O my here come the most disastrous
 "Remove the internet modem"....."Disconnect"...."Shout at them"!!!!
 Oh why don't you just whip them or crucify them, that would be better wouldn't it,? After all "The aim justify the mean". Seriously, It isn't that bad?. Well, believe it or not it is ,knowing that these are some of the parents answers of what they would do if they found that their kid is addicted to the internet while in another part of the survey 66 % of them think that their kids are sitting at the computer for a long time in the era of human rights and understanding !! . By disconnecting more than half of the connections it seems that our beloved parents have secret plans to break Batelco and are ready to sacrifice anything to do it. Certainly as you have never expected, nor have I .The kids' solutions to their fellows addiction sound more reasonable than their parents'. That makes me think, "Are the kids living in a world and the parents in another? Or is it just that the parents are refusing to believe that the world has changed-and is changing-?"