

Let's Take a

Sîrcova

Gymnasium Negureni

Radun
skaya

Chişinău, Moldova

Gumnasia №1
Starye Dorogi
Belarus

The climate and landscape

Autumn

Spring

Winter

Flowers and trees

Peonies

Tulips

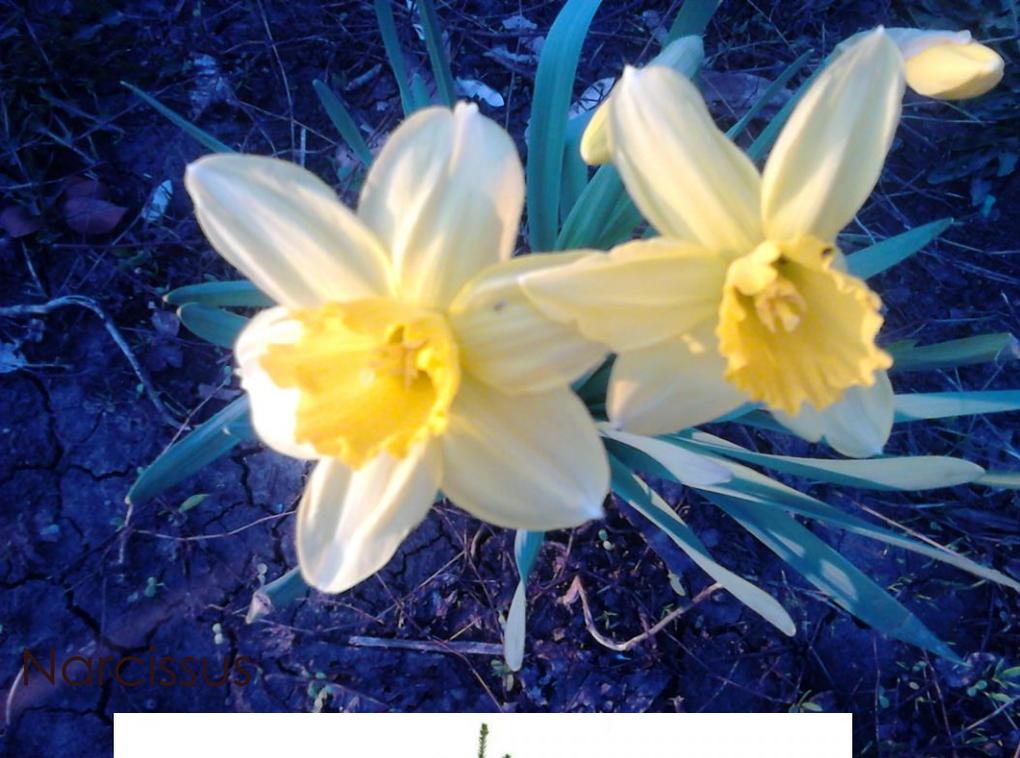

Snowdrops

Cherry

Locust tree

Narcissus

Fir

Dandelion

and dead nettle

Oak

Birch

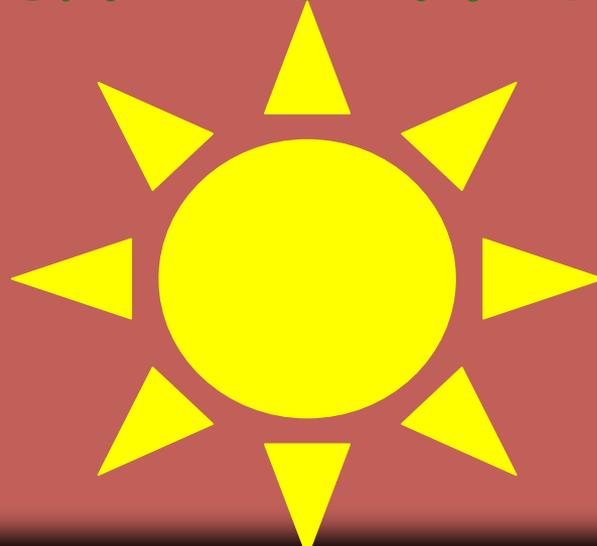

Pine

Linden

Native trees

Fir

Natural Vegetation

Moldova is situated in two natural zones: forest-steppe and steppe. However, natural vegetation has only been preserved in certain areas. Moldova's steppes originally were grass-covered, but most of them are now cultivated. Lush meadows and reed growths occur in the floodplains of the Dniester and portions of the Prut, while salt-marsh grasslands flourish in the saline valleys of the Cogâlnic, Ialpuș, Botna, and lower Prut.

The climate of Voronovsky District

The climate of the Voronovsky District is continental, with cold winters and relatively warm summers. The continental climate of Belarus is more distinct the closer the region is to the centre of the European continent and to the Eastern European Plain.

In general, nature has been favourable towards our land. Our climate is considered as moderate with average winter temperatures - 5°C and summer temperatures $+17^{\circ}\text{C}$. The amount of precipitation is about 700 millimeters per year. The vegetative period is 193 days.

The favourable climatic conditions of our area are suitable for cultivation of:

 wheat

 rye

 barley

 potato

 sugar beetroot

 maize and other agricultural plants

A lush garden scene featuring several fruit trees. On the left, a tree is heavily laden with green and yellow apples. On the right, a tree is covered in bright red berries. The foreground is filled with various flowers, including purple and white daisies, and green foliage. In the background, a wooden fence separates the garden from a field, with a small blue-roofed building visible in the distance under a cloudy sky.

The most common grown fruit and berries in the gardens are:

Apples

Pears

Cherries

Plums

Grapes

Strawberries

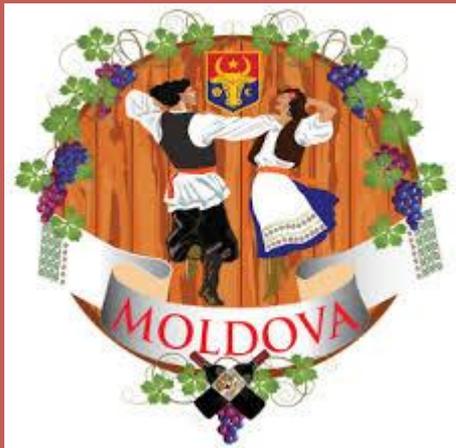

Raspberries

Gooseberries

Currant (black, red, white)

Festivals Not to Miss

Wine Day festival is organised every year on the first weekend of October all over Moldova, while the main events take place in the center of Chisinau. This Festival is the excellent possibility to taste the best Moldovan wines and national dishes, to see a lot of local and foreign artists, to get acquainted with national handicrafts or to participate in excursions to wineries.

The most famous festivals and events specific to our local community are:

Kupala
This day is a holiday of Ivan Kupala. It is celebrated on the night of 6 to 7 July, but according to some information our ancestors celebrated it on June 23 - on the eve of the summer solstice.

What are some of the local products you can find at local markets and regional events?

At our local market people sell different vegetables and fruit. You can buy potatoes, tomatoes, cucumbers, onions, greens, cabbages, pepper, carrots, apples and pears and many other.

